President's and Director's Report

mericans have begun to fear that they have become disconnected—from each other, from their neighbors, from society. Community institutions must respond to this desire for inclusion by reaching out and embracing the needs of individuals and families. The Toledo Museum of Art used 1996/97 to re-establish old links, expand existing relationships, and make new ones. We are striving to make connections with our audience, the community, the future, and the past.

Connecting With Our Audience

We have begun to realize that an art museum can be an intimidating place. The average visitor can feel isolated from the art, unable to link it to his or her own experiences. Through new technology and innovative programs we are exploring ways of establishing those links at your Museum. One way is with INFORM, a free audioguide to the galleries, which was launched in the spring of 1996 and greeted with enormous enthusiasm. Visitors, in fact, were so excited that during the Labor Day weekend every one of the INFORM units was checked out. In response to this overwhelming interest, Ameritech and the Maurice and Dorothy Stubnitz Foundation each awarded grants to support the expansion of INFORM. We have nearly doubled the capacity of INFORM to include 70 more of our most popular works of art for a total of 150 works in the collection.

Passports

It is critical to establish a connection with our younger audience. In our Passports program we are able to reach these young minds through their schools. Funded in part by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts, the Museum began a partnership this year with three Toledo Public Elementary Schools. In the pilot version of this program, seven sixth-grade classes from Franklin, Hawkins, and Stewart schools visited the Museum four times during the school year. The contents of their tours were coordinated with the sixth-grade social studies curriculum focusing on ancient civilizations. Passports has now become a permanent program of The Toledo Museum of Art.

Family Center

Families have precious few hours together in this rushed and often chaotic time. The Family Center was opened in October of 1996 to offer an opportunity for families to discover together the world of art and the treasures of the Museum. At the Family Center, visitors with children can pick up a gallery guide and plan their visit with the help of a volunteer, or relax with creative play or an art activity. Art materials, a house corner, costumes, books, games, and puppets introduce the magic of the Museum to young visitors. Monthly themes and changing activities ensure there will always be something new to do. Children and their adult companions can meet and work with a visiting artist on the first Sunday of each month. The unique art that they create is then displayed in the Family Center.

Art & the Workplace

Another way we can adjust to the changing lives of our audience is to bring the Museum and its public together through the medium of the workplace. A major grant awarded to the Museum this year by the directors of the Lila Wallace-Reader's Digest Fund will allow us to do just that. This grant will support Art & the Workplace, a project which will allow us to develop programs tailored to the needs and interests of the employees of members of the Museum's Business Council. We will be reporting to our Members in the coming year as this important program takes shape.

Exhibitions

Special exhibitions allow us to connect to large audiences. Our goal is to link with these groups and encourage them to stop by and see us more often. We are doing this by the kinds of exhibitions that we choose and the way we present them.

The first show of the 1996/97 year, A Decade of Giving: The Apollo Society, highlighted ten years of collecting by this important Museum donor group. From ancient Greek jewelry through a Tibetan Buddha statuette to Albert Paley's recent 14-foot steel sculpture Continuum, 26 works of art of great quality purchased by the Society for the Museum were exhibited.

In The Fire of Hephaistos: Large Classical Bronzes from North American Collections, visitors saw a familiar subject presented in a new way. Ancient bronze sculpture was revealed not as a series of unique masterpieces, but as the product of a sophisticated bronze industry. Through the use of x-ray images, fiber optic probes, an interactive computer kiosk and videotape presentations, visitors literally saw ancient sculpture from the inside out. During the exhibition, our neighbors at The University of Toledo Center for Visual Arts thrilled Museum visitors with bronze pouring demonstrations and casting models which brought the art to life.

Moving ahead 1500 years to the reign of Catherine the Great, we presented British Art Treasures from the Russian Imperial Collections in the Hermitage. In addition to presenting masterpieces of British art, this exhibition conveyed the Russian passion for things British. Featuring 160 works of art drawn exclusively from the collections of The State Hermitage Museum, the exhibition provided the first opportunity to see these important works outside of St. Petersburg. Included were paintings, sculpture, graphic arts, a rich selection of porcelain, silver, ceramics, furniture, clocks, jewelry, cameos, and engraved gems. This exhibition was made possible by Ford Motor Company. We drew from our permanent collections for the related exhibition, Russia After the Tsars: Prints, Photographs, and Books, which highlighted innovations by Russian artists in the 1930s and 1940s.

Stepping from Imperial Russia to contemporary Toledo, Tom Patti: Contemporary Glass Sculpture, connected the work of an important artist working in glass represented in our collections with an new piece of architecture in Toledo. Sponsored by Owens Corning, this exhibition coincided with the dedication of a major work in glass created by Patti for the new Owens Corning World Headquarters in downtown Toledo and featured 15 works from all phases of Patti's career.

Another local treasure was highlighted in Yoshida Hiroshi: Master Printmaker, which featured the Museum's group of prints by Yoshida, purchased in the 1930s. A video produced by the Museum accompanied the show, explaining the complex process of Japanese printmaking.

to be a welcoming place—a place where the visitor feels at home. An important step toward making this goal attainable is the development of a dynamic arts campus. This will open up the grounds of the Museum and connect us to the Old West End, the showplace of Toledo. Thanks to support from an anonymous donor Toledoans were able to see the Museum in a whole new light last fall when we launched the first step in this campaign, the new exterior lighting. Drive down Monroe Street at night and you will see the Museum glowing like a jewel. With financial support from Mr. and Mrs. David Welles, Sr., the next step begins next spring with the creation of a re-landscaped gateway to the Museum complex, the Old West End and Uptown at the intersection of Monroe Street and Collingwood Boulevard.

Connecting with the Future

Our collection of art spans 5000 years—from ancient Egypt to today. How do we continue to present information to our audience in new and innovative ways? How can we reach toward the 21st century, while still treasuring art from before the 1st century? One way is through the World Wide Web. Changes in lifestyles mean that the times when families are free may not coincide with the times when the galleries are open. With the help of GlassCity Net Inc., our Web site (www.toledomuseum.org) offers a way for the Museum and its audience to reach out to each other 24 hours a day. Our first goal was to offer an easy way for our audience to learn what's going on at their Museum and when it's happening. We hope to gradually expand the site to become a 24 hour-a-day Museum without walls.

Museums have traditionally lagged behind the private sector and even private individuals in their adoption of technology. This will no longer be true at The Toledo Museum of Art. Our Board of Trustees has approved a major revitalization of our information systems. A Museum-wide network, which includes the galleries and public spaces, will allow staff to deliver services to our audience in a timely and cost-efficient manner. This investment in the future will also allow us to engage in distance-learning projects and to place interactive kiosks in the galleries. Although this is an expensive step, we are taking it to better serve the needs of our ever-expanding and changing audience. We are extremely pleased to acknowledge the financial support of Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Knight and Mrs. and Mrs. Herbert R. Metzger for the networking project.

Connecting With Our Community

It's hard to make a large marble building feel warm and friendly, but we want the Museum

Connecting with the Past

The Toledo Museum of Art was founded with the intent of being a Museum for the entire community. As we approach our centennial celebration in the year 2001, we are looking back with pride over our history. Documents and photographs in our new Museum

Archives, made possible by support from the National Historical Publications and Records Commission, detail nearly 100 years of the involvement of the Museum, its staff, and its supporters in Toledo's cultural heritage. Through the Museum Archives, the community can discover again the influential and sometimes colorful individuals who founded the Museum and helped to shape its growth. The first example of this rediscovery, From the Archives: Harold Boeschenstein—“Mr. Fiberglas”, was an archival exhibition of photos and documents celebrating the life and influence of Harold Boeschenstein, the first president of Owens-Corning Fiberglas and board president of the Toledo Museum of Art from 1967-1972. It was he who urged so many loyal supporters of the Museum to create an endowment for the ongoing health of the institution.

Turning from one of Toledo's most prominent residents to its oldest, we are embarking on a program to restore a very popular exhibit, the coffin of the ancient Egyptian lady Ta-mit, which has long been displayed in Classic Court with one of our mummies. Conservation will require that both coffin and mummy be off view for about two years, but a make-over once every 2,000 years is really not much to ask for. While the coffin is being conserved, we are taking the opportunity to get to know our two mummies better. As a gift to the children of Toledo, The Toledo Hospital and The Children's Medical Center of Northwest Ohio arranged to X-ray and CT-scan the mummies during off hours in order to learn more about them. More information about the two ancient Egyptians will be revealed as study continues.

1996/97 was a remarkable year for The Toledo Museum of Art. We have reached out to our audience and to our community. While we have looked towards the future, we have not forgotten our past. Through these connections, we hope to make a visit to the Museum more relevant to the lives of our visitors, whether that visit be in person or over the Internet.

When Margaret (Hill) Wittmann, passed away in Santa Barbara, California on July 7, 1997 at the age of 84, Toledo and The Toledo Museum of Art lost a great friend. After receiving a Bachelor of Arts in History from Radcliffe College in 1936, Margaret went to the American School of Classical Studies in Athens, where she assisted with the excavations at Corinth and later on the North Slope of the Acropolis. During World War II she worked for the Office of Strategic Services where she was assigned to the Secret Intelligence Division on the Greek desk. In 1945, Margaret married Otto Wittmann. The next year the couple moved to Toledo where for thirty-one years, eighteen of them as Director, he shaped the development of The Toledo Museum of Art's collections.

Margaret was very active in the Toledo community, serving on the boards of a number of Toledo charitable, educational, and religious organizations and as a sustaining aide at The Toledo Museum of Art. Friends describe Margaret as a woman of great wit and charm, a good friend, and a kind person.

Our heartfelt sympathy goes to her husband Otto, her sons, William Hill Wittmann and John Carlisle Wittmann, and her five granddaughters.

Lectures, Tours, Performances, and Special Events

33,200 people attended the It's Friday programs, an increase of 21% from 1995/96.

The Fire of Hephaistos was enjoyed by 13,130 visitors. Tours, programs, lectures and workshops presented with the exhibition were attended by 3486 people.

Programs and lectures for British Art Treasures from Russian Imperial Collections in the Hermitage drew an audience of 3,244. The exhibition itself drew 35,000 people.

4,465 people attended the four Foodtown Kids' Concerts, which included two sold-out performances of The Magic School Bus.

Classes and Workshops

1,392 students attended Youth and Early Childhood Classes.

523 students and 81 adults participated in art activities at the after school program.

Family Center

In the 10 months since its grand opening, The Family Center has welcomed 4,367 children and adults. Visitors discover a hands-on play space for families, while exploring costumes, games, books, puppets, storytelling, musical experiments, and art activities.

Volunteers

Volunteers contributed 17,450 hours toward helping the Museum fulfill its mission.

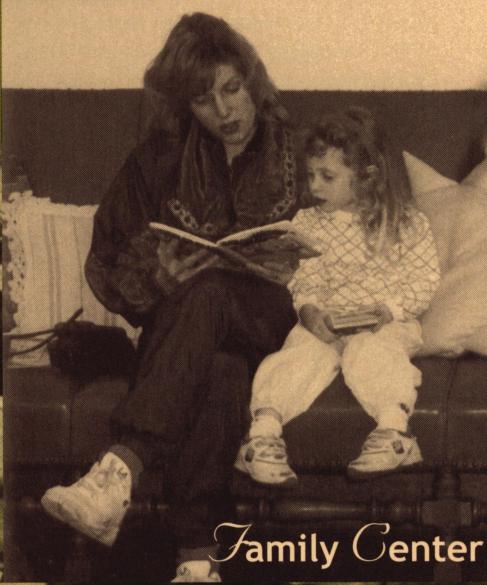

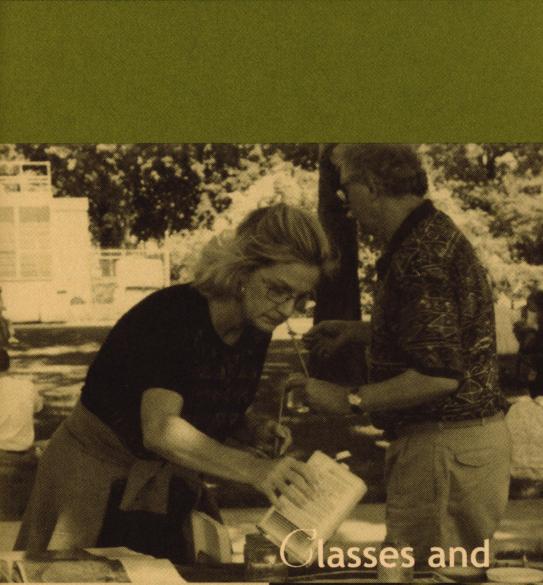

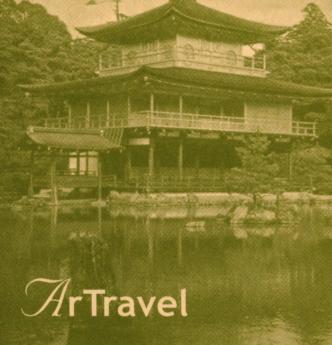

Volunteers can be found in every part of the Museum's operations; the Museum could not come close to fulfilling its mission without their dedication.

Community Learning Resource Center

Now in its third year of operation, the Center offers almost 2,000 books, teacher packets, videotapes, handling objects, interactive CD-ROMs, audiotapes, posters, laser disks, educational toys and discovery boxes.

The patron list now numbers 1,919, and includes teachers, home-schooling parents, University of Toledo staff and students, Museum staff, and the general public. 2,991 items were circulated, three times the number of the first year.

The Center offers a wide variety of teacher and home-schooling workshops scheduled throughout the year. Our audience has steadily grown and attendance was up almost 50% this past year.

Art Reference Library

During 1996/97 931 books and catalogues were added to the Library holdings. Service was provided to 9,756 patrons and a total of 3,777 items were circulated.

Through the fundraising efforts of the Museum Library League and the generosity of 38 donors, the Dictionary of Art, a 34-volume reference set was purchased for the Art Reference Library. This monumental set, which took 14 years and 6,700 authors to produce, will continue to provide a starting point for art historical reference for decades.

The Library is also the fortunate recipient of a large portion of the private library of the late Kurt T. Luckner, the Museum's Curator of Ancient Art. This will add a depth to areas of ancient art which we would not otherwise be able to offer to our patrons.

These books and catalogues are being integrated into the Library's holdings as we continue to add records to the database, which will form the nucleus of the Library's new automated system. Over 28,400 titles were converted into machine-readable format during 1996-97 and the remainder is in process. It is projected that the collection will be available by June 1998.

Visuals Resources Collection

The Visual Resources Collection added 6,000 slides to its holdings during the year. Circulation of slides remains constant at around 25,000 per year. 100 videos were also circulated this year. Patrons include Museum Members and staff, university students and University of Toledo faculty.

Loans to and from the Museum

79 works of art from the collections were lent to 24 different exhibitions hosted by 25 U.S. museums and 9 foreign museums in Australia, The Netherlands, France, Greece, Germany, and Switzerland.

In addition to artwork displayed in special exhibitions, the Museum has borrowed 490 works of art for gallery installations or study purposes from 15 private, museum, or corporate collections.

One loan from a neighbor museum has been of particular interest to visitors. While the Museum's Egyptian coffin of Ta-mit and mummy are off display for conservation, The Cleveland Museum of Art has lent us a painted shroud made to hold the mummified body of a young man (Mummy Shroud, Egyptian, 50 B.C.-A.D.150, Gift of the John Huntington Art and Polytechnic Trust, 14.715) for display in Classic Court.
